Dr. Jasmin Helan Retires

Dr. Jasmin Helan completed a long and distinguished career as a faculty member of the Community Health Department on November 6th, 2024. She joined CMC Vellore after completing her MBBS from Government Medical College Tirunelveli, to work for a year in the urban unit of CMC. She then worked as a PHC Medical Officer for four years, a period that gave her a lot of insights into the workings of the government public health system that she later brought to her teaching and services. She joined the Community Health Department for MD in Community Medicine programme in 1997. Dr. Jasmin completed an MPH from Tufts University, Boston in 2005.

With a special interest in maternal health, she underwent additional training through a DNB in maternal and child health and filled a much-needed gap as a readily available consultant, for all labor room and theatre related emergencies. Her efforts led to the establishment of full-fledged family planning services in CHAD hospital, and recognition from the government for the same. She also established services for HIV patients and was instrumental in providing holistic care for many women who suffered from the same. Dr. Jasmin served as the Head of the Community Health Department from 2014-2018. She believed in the hands-on approach and took steps to improve the functioning of various aspects of the CHAD programme and hospital, with a keen interest in staff welfare.

During her term as Head, the department was invited by WHO India to undertake an assessment of the NCD programme in Kerala. Her interest in NCDs also led to the establishment of a community gym for patients visiting CHAD hospital, as well as a similar one in a nearby village.

Dr. Jasmin is an excellent teacher, with areas of interest being survey methodology, demography, health economics and maternal health. She always took a keen interest in teaching, especially with regards to MD, MPH and MSc Epidemiology education, going out of her way to help students prepare for exams and dissertations. She has been a Ph.D guide for the TN Dr. MGR Medical University and the Sree Chithra Tirunal Institute for Medical Sciences and Technology. She has also contributed to strengthening research training in mission hospitals such as Oddanchatram.

Dr. Jasmin's research has focused on maternal health, perinatal care, reproductive tract infections, nutrition and NCDs. Based on the department's needs she undertook training in health economics at the Copenhagen School of Global Health and has been running a short course in Health Economics.

Besides her roles in the department, she also contributed to the institution by serving as Deputy Medical Superintendent. Her contribution towards educational scholarship programme for students in Jawadhi Hills is commendable and have benefited multiple students and their families. She has worked tirelessly towards establishing coaching programme and raising funds for providing educational scholarship. Her long years of organising the jasmine chain activity, through the Community Health Department is also appreciated.

Dr. Jasmin's husband, Mr. Prasad, has worked as an Engineer in CMC Vellore and her children, John Davis Prasad (2006) and Ann Helen (2010) are alumni of CMC Vellore. As Dr. Jasmin moves on to another phase of life, we would like to wish her and her family all the very best and thank her for her services to the Institution.
